Rita Mae Brown said: "Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going". It's true. Thanks to a lot of languages people ~~can~~ will learn something new about different countries and make new friends.

In my opinion, the road map of a culture is a very difficult, ~~thing~~ but interesting thing. It's very exciting to broaden our horizons. I agree with words by Rita Mae Brown. Firstly, all languages, all peoples and all cultures are different. Today you can learn one kind information, but the next day you can learn coordinally different information. Secondly, communication with people of other cultures can improve our knowledge about something.

As for me, I like travelling. I went ^{to} a lot of countries. For example, Turkey, Japan, China and so on. Every country has own language and ~~has~~ own culture. Thanks to communication with people from other countries, I learned a lot of new words and phrases. And the most important thing that I understood while travelling is language and, of course, communication on this language help you to learn where its people come from and what they are doing there.

In conclusion, I would like to say that learning languages is ~~is~~ very interesting, thrilling and exciting. We should learn something new, about people and their lives.
