

Rita Mae Brown considers that language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where are they going.

I like this quotation and appreciate it, agree with it, because nationalities that have ^{common} one language, also often have similarities in their cultures; for example, Russians and Ukrainians have a lot of common in their cultures: national food — borsch, pelmeni, songs, folklore, art, music.

Besides, language tells us about where its people come from and where they are going. We can see ~~it~~ at history⁹⁰. We know that a lot of Americans and Canadians came from Europe, we can know it because they ^{mostly} speak English, Spanish and French which are European languages.

We also can see that for example a lot of people in USA speak Spanish, because there are a lot of Mexicans. Mexicans know Spanish because some time ago Spanish soldiers ~~and~~ went to Mexico on their ships to colonize it.

So as we can see French language ^{was} very popular among rich people in 18-19th century, because of Peter I who started making good relationships with France, because Peter

That's why there are lots of French words in Russian language.

To sum it up, language ~~is~~ really shows us ~~is~~ a road map of a culture, because so many nationalists with similar language have a lot of common in their ~~cultures~~ cultures. From the ~~history~~ history we know a lot about where ~~its~~ people come from and where they are going. ~~by~~ language
So I appreciate Brown's ~~quotation~~ quotation
